THE KANSAS SUPREME. TOPEKA, Kan., July 7.—Arguments were heard in the supreme court vesterday afterneon in the case brought to test the pro-hibitory law which seeks to give authority to county attorneys to force witnesses summoned to appear before them to give evidence. The case came up in the form of an application for a writ of habeas cor-pus made by a man who was committed for contempt for refusing to give evidence to a county attorney. This portion of the law has never been passed upon by the supreme court. It was passed upon once by Judge Foster in the United States dis-trict court, when it was held that the law could give no such power to a prosecuting

AT OTHER POINTS.

AT OTHER POINTS.

FONDA, Is., July 7.—A tornado passed west and south of this place between 6 and 7 o'clock last evening, demolishing buildings and groves, injuring many persons and causing the loss of many lives. The course of the storm was a little southeast, and was preceded by an east wind and slow moving clouds going westward. It was attended by a heavy fail of rain and some hail and an unusual electric disturbance. It was one of the most terrific tornadoes ever known in this section, killing or mutilating every living thing with its bounds. The width was about 1,000 yards. Two women were killed and several others injured six miles south of Cherokee; ten persons were killed and several injured near Storm Lake, and nine were killed and two injured near Cherokee were Mrs. Leter and Mrs. Molyneaux. Near Fonda only one of the Garton family out of seven has been found. It is reported that four of the family of Mr. Bergess near Aurelia were killed. The loss of property is beyond estimation.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., July 7.—A violent tag met today for the first time for the consideration of regular parliamentary business, nearly all the 307 members were in their places, for it was known that the government would at once introduce the army bill, and general interest was felt as to the concessions, if any, that the felt as to the concessions, if any, that the government had made on the original bill. Immediately after the formal opening of the house was concluded. Chancellor you Caprivi ascended the tribune and in a long speech introduced the amended measure. He stated that the present form of the bill represented the minimum that could be accepted in men and that the government's demands were the lowest possible consistent with the safety of the empire. The previous bill had been before parliament and the country for nine months, and everybody understood what the government wanted. It was therefore needless to repeat the arguments that had been heretofore advanced.

The keynote of the speech was that foreign countries, not knowing intimately the German character, had been led to believe that Germany had lost confidence in berself, and that the states composing the German empire were no longer united. This, the chancellor declared, was an erroneous impression, which ought to be quickly dispoiled by the speedy adoption of the new bill.

The chancellor referred to the action of Russia in increasing the peace footing of her army by 34,000 men since 1889, and said that she had not yet exhausted ber resources. Germany, he declared, must increase her peace footing if her voice was to sources. Germany, he declared, must increase her peace footing if her voice was to sources. The assertion made by the opposition that Germany did not have sufficient men to answer the calls for recruits was disproved by the fact that '80, '000 serviceable men had not been recruited. The new taxes that must necessarily be levied would be borne on strong shoulders. It was the government's intention to again introduce the old flushcial proposals, especially the one providing for a tax on hourse transactions. The increase involved an expenditure of 66,800,000 marks in a lump sum. The annually recurring a proposal of the season, and the duliness in the shoe are for the season, and the duliness in the shoe manufacture is almost unprecedented. in a fump sum. The annually recurring expenditure was fixed at 64,000,000 marks. When the new system should have been fully developed Germany would have in times of war a trained army of 4,400,000 men. The previous proposals of the government had not met the approval of the house, and in attempting to fix upon a measure that would be acceptable to the reichstag the government had accepted Freiherr von Hune's suggestion and had incorporated it in the bill. This suggestion was that the peace effective should be increased by 50.000 men at once, and in government submitted to the new house a measure that was, in its details, practically the old Huene compromise bill.

Herr Payer, a member of the Volkspartel, followed the chancellor. He declared that it was not true that the country had pronounced for nor did a make.
